TNT Services Group holds grand opening

TNT Services Group, a regional supplier of building materials for the residential market, opened its new headquarters and distribution center on Friday at the Stanford Industrial Park.

The 33,00-square-foot headquarters and distribution center has an excellent geographic location, said Don Tarleton, president and secretary of the company. Located off Mountville Road, the new location is about seven miles from major interstates, Mr. Tarleton said.

"Our new location provides us better access to our markets in Northern Virginia and central Maryland," he said.

Mr. Tarleton and his brother, James, began the business six years ago as a home-based company, then moved to Monrovia and Frederick before acquiring the new site. Tom Matan and Tyler-Donagan Real Estate assisted the brothers in finding the site at Stanford Industrial Park, which is owned by Ruppert Properties.

"It's been a bumpy road at times, but with the help of many people we arrived at where we are today," Mr. Tarleton said.

The company now has 30 employees.

"We do a great job at point of sale, but we've been told that we do an even better job with our service after the sale," said Mr. Tarleton. "And now we have a facility that allows us to meet the needs of our clients in a more efficient manor. Our goal has always been to provide the best service possible and now we can store and retrieve our clients products in a cost effective way."

TNT provides high quality residential doors and windows, as well as other products.
